Keynote Speaker

James A. Evans graduated from BYU in anthropology in 1994 with an honors thesis in economics and was the valedictorian and convocation speaker for the BYU College of Family, Home, and Social Sciences. He returns today to mark the 75th anniversary of the BYU Anthropology Department and share his perspective on the potential and value of social science for the world. Evans went on to work at Harvard Business School and earn a doctorate in sociology at Stanford. He is currently the Max Palevsky Professor of History and Civilization in Sociology at the University of Chicago. He is director of Knowledge Lab and founding director of the program in computational social sciences as well as an external professor at the Santa Fe Institute. His research focuses on the system of thinking and knowing, ranging from the power of diversity and discord for innovation; the influence of social and cultural institutions such as disciplines, teams, and language on understanding; and how technical advances like the internet and artificial intelligence shape collective cognition and can be redesigned to radically improve it. Evans helped establish the science of science and innovation, and he explores knowledge related to discovery, invention, mis- and disinformation in society, the transformation of skills and the future of work, and approaches to AI that complement rather than compete with human capacity. Evans founded the IEEE Journal of Social Computing and supports the creation of novel digital observatories, distributed experiments, and AI collaborators to cast new light on society, culture, and knowledge. His research is funded by the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health, DARPA, and many other public agencies, philanthropies, and companies and has been published in Nature, Science, PNAS, and top social and computer science outlets. His work has been featured in the Economist, Atlantic Monthly, New York Times, and many major national and global news outlets. Evans and his wife, Jeanne ('94), are parents of four children—one of whom is currently attending BYU.

Department Valedictorians

Megan Van Alfen Brown, a family studies major, is passionate about helping, educating, and healing individuals and families. She is a Wheatley Scholar and has received several awards for her educational achievements. Megan has worked as a teaching assistant and a research assistant with professors in the BYU School of Family Life for several years. She is passionate about researching gender, body image, mental health, and sexuality and hopes to center her career around these fields. She will be attending graduate school in the fall at Brigham Young University for her master's degree in marriage, family, and human development. Megan plans to pursue a PhD and become a professor so that she can educate students and families about complex topics that deserve increased attention. In her free time, she loves spending time with her husband, being outdoors, catching up with friends, and building her floral design business.

Hannah Katherine Dixon, a sociology major with a minor in English, grew up in American Fork, Utah. She served a full-time mission in Poland and is graduating with university honors. During her time at BYU, Hannah has relished research opportunities. She has participated in a Ballard Center Social Impact Project, held a research assistantship in the Sociology Department, worked with the BYU Antiracism Project, and completed many class projects. Other highlights of her BYU experience include the Honors program, volunteer and mentorship opportunities with first-year students, long hours in the library, and hiking to the Y more than 100 times. Hannah is grateful for the mentors, family members, colleagues, and friends who have made her time at BYU fulfilling, and she credits their examples of grit and optimism, along with their encouragement, for getting her to this point. She looks forward to continuing her studies at BYU this fall as a student in the sociology master's program.

Kellie Anne Haddon is a geography major with an emphasis in global studies and minors in international development and sociology. While at BYU, she had the opportunity to work as a research assistant for Brandon Plewe on the Mormon Places project during her freshman year. She also worked as a teaching assistant for Chad Emmett's political geography class. Kellie is excited to end her time at BYU on the Multicultural Europe Study Abroad with Jill Knapp during spring term. This year Kellie served as one of the presidents of the Students for International Development club. She will begin graduate school in the fall in the master's in international development program at American University in Washington, DC. Kellie served as a missionary in Cebu, Philippines, and enjoys painting, hiking, and exploring new places. She has lived in six states but mainly grew up in the suburbs of Chicago. Kellie is grateful for her incredible family, friends, professors, and mentors for their continual support throughout her time at BYU.

Alexander Bruce Johnson is an economics and mathematics double major with minors in Spanish and Portuguese. During his time at BYU, he realized that he possesses a love for learning and solving problems. He initially became interested in economics through James Kearsal's Econ 110 class, where he learned to use a mathematical and logical framework to better understand the world. Through his experience in economics, Alex developed a passion for statistics and mathematical modeling, using and analyzing data to learn about the world in an economics framework. Seeing the strength of mathematics in such an applied context, he supplemented this growing passion for applied modeling by also studying mathematics. This preparation has allowed him to continue his education, with plans to study applied mathematics in a master's program. Alex would like to express his sincere gratitude for all his professors, family members, friends, and classmates, all of whom have been integral in his learning.

Pamela Burgon Peterson has attended BYU as a nontraditional student for the last 13 years while raising a family of six children—her greatest accomplishment. As a developing family historian, she finds the detective work of family history fulfilling and invigorating. Pam plans to pursue a career in family history with an emphasis in British research while she prepares for her accredited genealogist credential exams. She has loved her years at BYU and the wonderful professors she has been privileged to learn from and associate with. Her professors and fellow students have opened her eyes to new ideas, perspectives, and perceptions of peoples, cultures, and the world we live in. Her previously limited paradigm has been broadened and enhanced by her experiences and education at BYU. Pam is grateful for divine help and extends a sincere thank-you to the BYU faculty who give their lives to teach others.

Reilly O'Coyle Reid, a psychology major with a minor in business, is from Henderson, Nevada. The oldest of four girls, she is grateful for her loving parents and the special relationship she has with her sisters. During her time at BYU, she has come to appreciate the vast educational opportunities available at this university, and she is always searching for the chance to research and teach. Reilly began her undergraduate education as a business major and enjoyed learning about finance, economics, and accounting. She later discovered that studying psychology would fulfill her passion of helping individuals, families, and couples heal. Her research emphasis has been clinical psychology and mental health services. She is inspired by studying psychology subject matter and is thrilled to continue her education in BYU's marriage and family therapy master's program in August. Reilly is grateful for her professors, classmates, friends, and family who have supported her as she has completed her bachelor's degree.

Kesley Brooke Townsend, a political science major with a political strategy emphasis and minors in history and sociology, is the oldest child of John and Cindy Powell. She was raised in Richland, Washington, and developed a passion for US political history at a young age. During her time at BYU, she conducted original research as a research fellow with the Center for the Study of Elections and Democracy and worked as a research assistant for Jay Goodliffe, Jessica Preece, Jeremy Pope, and Lisa Argyle. Kesley interned at TargetPoint Consulting while participating in the Washington Seminar program and worked as a political strategy advisor on a US Senate campaign. She was president of the BYU Women in Politics organization and a writer for the BYU Political Review. Kesley will begin a research fellowship at TargetPoint Consulting this summer and looks forward to pursuing a PhD in political science in 2023. She is incredibly grateful for the mentorship provided by BYU faculty and for the continued support of her family and friends.

Leeann H Whiffen, an anthropology major, was born and raised on a cattle ranch in rural Idaho. Leeann spent much of her youth helping her dad tend to the cows, swath hay, and irrigate fields. She is grateful for those experiences that have helped shape who she is today. Leeann and her husband, Sean, have been married for 25 years, and they have three sons. Her husband and sons have always supported her educational goals, and Leeann has the special opportunity to be graduating from BYU with her son Clay. On one especially challenging day, she noticed a note in her chemistry notebook that said, "Good luck, Mom!" Leeann completed research under the supervision of Greg Thompson; they coauthored an article examining physician-patient interactions that was published in the healthcare journal Qualitative Health Research. She is deeply appreciative of her professors, who have given her invaluable tools that will help her succeed in her future endeavors. Leeann has completed premedical coursework and plans to attend medical school.
